

Now join A to B by the straight chord AB , a shortcut that cuts beneath the arc. Imagine the point B now sliding down the curve toward A . As B draws nearer, the chord AB grows shorter and shorter, and its direction settles into the direction of the curve at A . It is this swivelling of the chord that the next step compares against the tangent.