

The pull toward the centre is as the square of the speed divided by the distance from the centre.