

Newton considers a plane figure $AacE$ bounded by the straight side Aa , the baseline AE , and the curve acE . The baseline is divided into the equal bases AB , BC , CD , so that the base is partitioned into segments of one common breadth. The whole question concerns the area enclosed beneath the curve — for it is this curve that is the heart of the figure and of the Lemma.